

Friday, May 20, 2005

Web  bostonphoenix.com

- Personals
- Gaming
- Band Guide
- MP3 Studio
- Best Music Poll
- Digital Photo Guide
- The Best

Music

Bands in town

Clubs by night

Listings:

Club directory

Pop

Concerts

Classical

Hot links

Movies

By theater

By movie

Film

specials

Hot links

Theater

By play

Hot links

Dining

By restaurant

By location

By cuisine

Hot links

Books

Literary calendar

Authors in town

By location

Hot links

Dance

Performance

Participatory

Hot links

Art

Museums

Galleries

Photography

Schools

Hot links

Comedy

TEXT SIZE

THIS WEEK

Home

In This Issue

Listings

Editor's Picks

News & Features

IN ARTS

Art

Astrology

Books

Dance

Food & Drink

Gaming

Movies

Music

Television

Theater

CLASSIFIEDS

Classifieds Home

Adult

Adult Personals

Personals

Love Q&A

Letters

NEWS & FEATURES

E-Mail This Article to a Friend

Lost weekend (continued)

THE DELEGATES who made for the exits after the gubernatorial candidates strutted their stuff missed out on the event's lone bit of drama. After the Democratic platform had been rubber-stamped, the convention took up proposed changes to the state party's charter. And the ensuing hubbub shook those who'd stuck

Related links

Massachusetts Democratic Party

Includes a link to the party's revamped platform and, in the near future, should include the amended charter and the text of speeches given at the convention.

Blue Mass. Group convention coverage

Notes from the 2005 Democratic convention from a good local political blog, including some nice

Killington Tennis at Killingtontennis.com

Email the Webmaster
Archives
Education

Sponsored Link
Snowboard Shop

Personal Ad of the Day

Cola

Age: 59

Looking For Local Woman...

CLICK HERE FOR MORE

around out of their collective stupor.

First, a bit of history. Three years ago — bolstered by a groundswell of support among independent and Green voters who became Democrats just before the party's nominating convention — the insurgent gubernatorial campaign of former Clinton labor secretary Robert Reich nearly succeeded. Since then, there's been lingering distrust between the Reichies, who see themselves as the progressive saviors of a moribund state party, and veteran Democratic activists, who see the Reichies as sad-sack malcontents and annoying interlopers.

The party stalwarts got the best of things last weekend. Post-Lowell, last-minute registration for the local caucuses that determine the make-up of the Massachusetts Democratic Party's gubernatorial nominating convention is no longer possible; now, candidates need to register as Democrats by December 2005 rather than by September 2006. Furthermore, the balance of power between the Democratic State Committee (DSC) and the party's annual conventions — which gave progressive insurgents a regular chance to push their agenda — has been reversed: while state conventions formerly trumped the dictates of the DSC, the latter now reigns supreme.

There's more. Pre-Lowell, the state party was barred from supporting any Democrat who — instead of backing the Democratic nominee for a given office — supported another Democrat candidate. That prohibition is now gone. (If this sounds complicated, consider the case of Representative Carl Sciortino, who ousted incumbent Vincent Ciampa in the Democratic primary last fall and then fended him off again in the general election, in which Ciampa ran as an independent. Under the old rules, colleagues of Ciampa who supported him in his second run would have burned their bridges with the state party; under the new rules, that's no longer the case.) Furthermore, the elected members of the DSC now serve for four years, not two. Finally, pre-Lowell, any DSC meeting was open to the public. Now, some are automatically closed to the public, and others can be closed by a two-thirds vote.

At the convention, the Reichies and their progressive cohorts seemed not to realize what was happening until the very last original commentary and about 30 responses.

DemocraticStateCommittee.com

This Web site is not affiliated with the Massachusetts Democratic State Committee. Instead, it provides critical commentary on the committee and its activities from the party's progressive-left contingent. Currently features numerous postings about what transpired at this year's convention in Lowell.

WHAT'S THE BUZZ ABOUT?

Host a KittyLiXX Pleasure Toy Home Party & find out!

1-866-844-LIXX

KittyLiXX.com

MOtophoto PORTRAIT STUDIO

36 JFK STREET
 CAMBRIDGE, MA
 617-663-6568

minute. Once they did, they tried to trigger debate about the changes using a parliamentary maneuver; after this failed, something approaching pandemonium ensued, with a segment of disgruntled delegates launching a loud chorus of boos and the chair demanding (unsuccessfully) that the dissidents "show some respect."

Afterward, Jesse Gordon — a Cambridge delegate and city-council candidate who's become a kind of professional thorn in the side of the state-party apparatus — hinted darkly at a coming progressive revolt. "We choose to follow the rules, and then they choose to change the rules," Gordon complained. "We've got big stuff planned to fight this. People are saying we should declare open war on the party. I don't know. But I can tell you they pissed off a lot of people." For her part, Jane Lane, the state party's spokesperson, dismissed Gordon's suggestion that the charter changes were aimed at preventing future Reich-esque candidacies. "Jesse Gordon is wrong as usual," Lane retorted. "The fact of the matter is, Jesse Gordon doesn't like the Democratic Party. He's trying to change the rules and skirt the rules in order to change them to his liking. Well, that's not going to happen."

In terms of sheer drama, this spat — coming at the tail end of a remarkably uneventful convention — was a welcome development. But as far as the overall health of the Massachusetts Democratic Party goes, it did not bode well. For the Democrats to retake the corner office next fall, the candidate, whoever he or she is, will need to squeeze every vote possible out of an electorate with a demonstrated affinity for Republican governors. If frustration prompts the Democratic left wing to lose interest — or to look to a third-party candidate, as happened with the Greens' Jill Stein in 2002 — only the Republicans will benefit.

Adam Reilly can be reached at areilly@phx.com

page 1 page 2

Issue Date: May 20 - 26, 2005

Back to the News & Features table of contents

E-Mail This Article to a Friend

Sponsor Links

Concert Shows

MLB Baseball

about the phoenix | find the phoenix | advertising info | privacy policy | the masthead | Webmaster | feedback | work for us

Copyright © 2004 Phoenix Media/Communications Group

Ads by Goooooogle

John Kerry for President

The real deal. The right choice. Democrat 2004
www.johnkerry.com

Anti "W" sticker

answer those little black squares bumper stickers sweat shirts
dontblamemeivoted4kerr

Almanac of Amer. Politics

Get the 2006 edition of the renowned political guide
www.aap2006.com

Welcome to Jesus land USA

Exiting Reality and Now Entering Jesus land (formerly USA) tshirts!
www.smartdecals.com